

ARRANGE FUNERAL FOR CLERK OF CO. COMMISSIONERS

Late Washington Cadwallader
Served in That Office
For 26 Years

SERVICE TOMORROW

Had Earlier in Life Followed the Profession of Farming

DOYLESTOWN, Sept. 9.—Arrangements were made today for the funeral of Washington Cadwallader, for twenty-six years clerk of the Bucks County Commissioners, who died at his home in Warrington township on Wednesday afternoon following a heart attack.

Mr. Cadwallader, who has been an outstanding figure in the routine work of the office of the County Commissioners and in the Republican politics of Warrington Township for many years, was taken ill nearly a year ago, but was able last Thursday to attend a reunion of the McKinstry Family Association at the Doylestown Country Club. He suffered a relapse last Sunday night.

Mr. Cadwallader was sixty-one. Thirty-nine years ago he married Miss Agnes Meredith, of Ivyland, who is one of the survivors.

The deceased was born on the Cadwallader homestead in Warrington Township, the son of Eli and Sara Knight Cadwallader. His mother, aged eighty-four, living in Chalfont, is a survivor.

Mr. Cadwallader was engaged in farming throughout his life-time but in 1906 entered the office of the Bucks County Commissioners, where he became during the course of years of service there, one of the best known men in Bucks County.

For twenty-five years, up until his death, he was the secretary of the Warrington Township School Board and for a number of years was a director of the Whitehall Mutual Fire Insurance Company. He was a trustee and active member of the Neshaminy Presbyterian Church of Warwick.

His fraternal affiliations included William K. Bray Lodge, F. and A. M., of Hatboro, and Aquetong Lodge No. 193, I. O. O. F., of Doylestown.

Mr. Cadwallader was for a number of years president of the Cadwallader Family Association and was re-elected president of the clan at the 1931 reunion held at Chalfont.

The survivors include the widow, Mrs. Agnes M. Cadwallader, of "Kennedale Farm," the Cadwallader homestead in Warrington; his mother, Mrs. Sara Cadwallader, of Chalfont; two sons, Russell Cadwallader and Atlee Cadwallader, of Warrington; three daughters, Mrs. William R. Oahle, of Jenkintown; Miss Catherine Cadwallader, of Warrington, a graduate nurse; and Mrs. Willard Kratz, of Catasauqua; three sisters, Mrs. Reuben Martin, of Chalfont; Mrs. Harry Abbott, of Hatboro; Mrs. Elsie Brinker, of Chalfont; and one brother, Grant Cadwallader, of Wilkes-Barre.

Friends have been invited to attend the viewing this evening from seven until nine, at the Cadwallader homestead. The funeral will be held on Saturday at the Neshaminy Presbyterian Church of Warwick.

Man Who Killed Wife Said To Be Dying

BURLINGTON, N. J., Sept. 9.—(INS)—Crazed with jealousy, a husband blazed away with a shotgun at his wife here, then turned the gun on himself in an attempt to end his own life. As a result of the attack, Mrs. Clara Smith, 23, of 204 Taylor avenue, is dead today, and the husband, Norman Smith, 35, is in a dying condition in the Burlington County Hospital at Mount Holly.

Two of the four small children of the couple witnessed the tragedy. Smith from his cot at the hospital, police said, informed them that his wife went to Vermont on August 19 with a neighbor whose attentions she had been receiving. Recently she returned and yesterday she said she was going away again with the "other man."

A bitter quarrel followed. Finally, terror-stricken, Mrs. Smith fled to a nearby soft drink parlor with their two little daughters, Mary, 6, and Myrtle, 5. She tried to telephone police, Anthony Francisco, owner of the place said, in an effort to have her husband arrested.

As she emerged from the establishment her husband drove up in an automobile and motioned for her to approach. As she did he raised a shotgun and fired pointblank. She collapsed, dying soon afterwards. After shooting his wife, according to Francisco, Smith stepped to the pavement and placing the muzzle of the gun under his left armpit, pulled the trigger. He was rushed to the hospital where he is not expected to live.

REGISTERS AT PHILA. SCHOOL

Jack Pieters, North Radcliffe street, has registered as a student at Northeast Catholic High School, Philadelphia, and will take up studies there September 20th.

Legion Conventioneers at Play

Bill Browne (left), huskiest cop in Portland, Ore., and sergeant-at-arms for the national convention of the American Legion, and Bowman Elder (right), of Indianapolis, Ind., national treasurer of the Legion, are shown as they waxed playful and gave Aaron M. Frank, chairman of Portland's reception committee, a soldiers' ride, when Elder arrived for the opening of the Legion convention. This meeting of the veterans is expected to be the most important yet held, as the vexatious bonus question is certain to come up for discussion.

ANCIENT PUMPER WILL GIVE DEMONSTRATION

Hulmeville's "Little 'Billy' Penn" to Go to Philadelphia on 20th

AT INDEPENDENCE HALL

HULMEVILLE, Sept. 9.—The "Little 'Billy' Penn," 95-year old hand-pumper of William Penn Fire Company, is to be given an opportunity to show what is in her when in Philadelphia, September 20th, fire insurance companies and underwriters of the nation convene.

Great plans are being pushed forward for a most unusual demonstration during the week of the convention, when on the 20th at Independence Hall the development of fire-fighting equipment through the last 150 years will be shown.

Tentative plans call for many of the firemen, particularly those from the Philadelphia section to be garbed in colonial style. When the demonstrations are about to commence at the Independence Hall structure, Lenore Urie and another well-known actress, both of whom will be playing in the Quaker City that week, will rush from the building crying "Fire!" The "bucket brigade" will then go into action as it did years ago. Then will follow demonstrations with squirt guns, hooks, and later the hand-pumping engines. This is where the Hulmeville apparatus will "shine," for it is to be given a place of honor on one side of the entrance to Independence Hall, with the old Tuscorora pumper from Clifton Heights on the other side of the door-way. The "Little 'Billy' Penn" will be seen in action, and in recent demonstrations she was operated to perfection. The more improved type of fire-fighting equipment will then follow, with huge modern engines being brought into play. The grand finale will occur when the most modern equipment, installed during the last few years at the Hall of Independence, will make a curtain of water about the building.

The program including the demonstrations which will occur between the hours of 11 and 12 a. m., will be broadcast through a national hook-up. Motion pictures will be "shot."

The 95-year old hand-pumper, prized by Hulmeville firemen, will be in charge of Chief Thomas K. Schatt and a corps of local firemen.

The Bucks County Historical Society plans to send an old type of apparatus to the demonstrations, having chosen one formerly located at Langhorne. Engines typical of the last century and a half will be sent to Philadelphia, coming from Baltimore, Md., Alexandria, Va., and many points in Pennsylvania and New Jersey. The "Darby Ram" type will also be included, this model being 150 years old.

Newtown Woman Is Hurt When Two Cars Collide

NEWTOWN, Sept. 8.—Mrs. John Hughes, of this place, was lacerated about the face by flying glass late this afternoon when the car she was driving figured in an accident with another machine driven by William O. Hillicus, of Perkiomenville.

Arraigned before Justice of the Peace Crossdale after being charged with reckless driving by Highway Patrolman Diem, Hillicus was fined $25 and costs.

Roy Matthews, Maple Beach, has left for Pittsburgh where he will make an indefinite visit with relatives.

MEN OF BOROUGH HEAR S. A. KENT'S ADDRESS

Men Told of Work of The English-Speaking Union

ALSO SHOWN PICTURES

Men affiliated with the Fathers' Association with members of the Rotary and Exchange Clubs as their guests gathered in the Bristol high school auditorium last evening to hear an address delivered by Samuel Kent, a representative of the English Speaking Union.

The talk was illustrated with moving picture films of Bristol, England, the same that had yesterday morning been shown to students of Bristol senior and junior high schools.

Abstracts of the address follow: A member of Parliament was showing to an American the River Thames from the terrace of the House of Commons. So far from being overpowered by its magnificence, the visitor compared it, with disadvantages, to the Mississippi and other great rivers of our native land. "But you don't seem to understand," said his host, waving his hand towards the Bridge and the Tower, "this river is liquid history." And so I may say to you who are to see this small film today, if you think it is not so elaborate as feature "talkies" made in Hollywood, or as "snappy" as current news-reel subjects sponsored by one of our American "movie" corporations, that it brings, nevertheless, a personal expression of greeting from citizens of another Bristol and a faithful reproduction of their environment, showing carefully selected pictures of places and things which mean much to them. Thus you may come to know each other.

It is, of course, natural that in a land settled by people from afar, familiar names should be given to new locations, to keep alive old associations and sentiment. Because of this we find names of cities and towns of New England and the Eastern seaboard recurring again and again in western states as the frontier moved toward the Pacific with the early pioneers. Just so, those first settlements were named by the Puritans and Cavaliers from old England, Plymouth and Boston and innumerable New England towns were called after cities in the homeland, and Jamestown named promptly for the King.

As our country grew, there were sporadic attempts to make interesting contacts between the old and new communities bearing the same name. Especially was this true on occasions celebrating anniversaries, or historical events, or sometimes as distinguished visitors happened to arrive, and many cities have records of such casual happenings.

A year or so ago, however, it was deemed wise to make a definite attempt to further such connections as one method of contributing to that general understanding between peoples of the world which eventually should bring peace and goodwill to all nations.

The English-Speaking Union of the United States, an organization whose avowed purpose is "to draw together in the bond of comradeship the English-speaking people of the world," and which cooperates to that end with its sister society in Great Britain, has gladly undertaken to foster this movement.

BOYS CAUGHT IN RACKET FORCED TO MAKE GOOD

Victims Are Newspaper Carriers Who Find the 'Collectors' Have Preceded Them

SOME NABBED BY POLICE

Tell Unsuspecting Customers New Carrier is On The Route

The latest racket to be practiced here is being worked by boys of tender years who have evolved a new scheme for obtaining "easy" money.

Police have been called to break up the scheme and as a result several youngsters have been called before Chief of Police Linford J. Jones. The lads have been lectured severely and forced to make restitution to those who have been caused losses through the practice of the racket.

Chief Jones promises more severe punishment to those who are caught from now on using not only the illegal but dishonest means as well, of obtaining money which rightfully belongs to others.

The victims of this newest of rackets are newspaper carriers who have been fleeced out of their earnings from time to time, until things became so bad that they called in the police.

The scheme is for a youngster to visit the customers of a paper carrier on his collection days, previous to the time he plans to visit them. The customer is told that a new boy has taken over the route and is now doing the collecting formerly done by the boy with whom the customer is acquainted. Not suspecting anything wrong, the boy is paid the money which rightfully belongs to another.

A few hours or in some instances only a few minutes later along comes the boy who is actually serving the route and he endeavors to collect and is much surprised to find that he has been preceded by another. The customer learns for the first time that he or she is a victim of the newsboys' racket and the newsboy learns that he is the loser of several dollars and has no way of tracing who has fleeced him of his earnings.

In some instances the boy fleeced has caught up with the guilty one and police have been told, and in these cases the guilty boy has been brought before Chief Jones and forced to make restitution.

Food Exchange Arranged With W. C. T. U. Session

In connection with the W. C. T. U. meeting on Tuesday evening, September 13th, at the Travel Club home, there will be a food exchange in charge of the social committee.

Also reports from the county convention at Richboro on Saturday, September 10, which a number from Bristol expect to attend, will be heard.

IN RHODE ISLAND

Anthony Rocco, of 506 Pond street, left last night for Providence, R. I., where he is visiting relatives.

SHORTAGE IN ROCKS

(By "The Stroller")

"A rock from here, and a rock from there" might well be the title to be given a game that practically all grown-ups are "playing" these days.

The habit of "rock choosing" has become such an obsession that when the family starts out for a ride with some friends, they come back bringing the friends and some rocks. And woe to the one who inadvertently lets his or her toe slip beneath the rocks on the floor of the car.

When some sections of America were first settled, we are told the farmers did not know what to do with the rocks and the "cobblestones" they were thrown aside from the new-made fields, eventually to become stone-fences, stone-houses, stone-barns, stone-walls, and stone-whatnots.

Now the entire populace knows what to do with the stones (or rocks) as they are more frequently called nowadays, and the result is we have: Rock gardens, rock glens, rock-eries, and rocks and more rocks.

Now the farmer's main job is not to know what to do with the rocks, but figure a way to protect his rock pile if he has such set aside for a special purpose.

Many a woman gardener can point with pride to her bed of rocks interspersed with a few flowers, and tell of the distance they were brought. But the fever has spread, and now they're all doing it. The men too! They go in for big rocks and those of unusual conformation and color.

Yes, the "rock" craze is rocking the country, but it's a healthy, cheap, and pleasure-giving hobby.

DAVIS NOT TO WITHDRAW

Philadelphia, Sept. 9.—Senator James J. Davis will not withdraw from his campaign for reelection to the United States Senate. This revelation was made here today by James N. Hazlett, chairman of the local Republican City Committee. The disclosure came following a trip to Washington by Hazlett and General Edward Martin, State Republican chairman.

16 MEN KILLED

New York City, Sept. 9.—Sixteen workmen were dead, 30 injured in the hospitals and an undetermined number missing as a result of a sudden explosion today aboard the steamer, "Observation" in the East River off 136th Street. The vessel was carrying 150 workmen to Riker's Island. The steamer blew up as it was backing out of the slip and sank almost immediately. The deaths, injured and missing toll were given by Police Commissioner E. T. Mulrooney, who assumed charge of the rescue work. The workmen aboard the ill-fated vessel were mostly skilled workers, carpenters, iron workers and steel employees engaged in building a new penitentiary on Riker's Island.

RIVALS MAY MEET

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 9.—Jean Harlow, beautiful platinum blond screen actress and Dorothy Millette, the two women who loved Paul Bern, during his life, may come face to face today for the first time at the funeral. This contingency, admittedly more than a possibility, arose when it became known Miss Millette, the phantom mate of the motion picture executive, had emerged from the past following his suicide. She was at the San Francisco Hotel the day Bern sent a bullet crashing through his brain, disappearing after news of his act had been made public.

Number May Be Approximately Same as Last Year at Close of First Month

314 IN SENIOR HIGH

A total of 2207 students are enrolled to date at Bristol public schools, according to an announcement made today by Superintendent Howard E. James.

The number is approximately the same as at the beginning of the 1931-32 term, the total given for the end of September, last year, being 2268. It is presumed the number will nearly reach that mark by the end of this month.

In the senior high school are 314 students; junior high school, 434; grades at Harriman building, 310; Jefferson avenue building, 375; Wood street building, 309; Bath street building, 258; Washington street school, 131; Beaver street, 76.

Six Months' Illness Fatal to S. T. Valentine

In ill health since March, and bed-fast for the past two weeks, Samuel T. Valentine, painter and decorator, was claimed by death at his home here this morning at nine o'clock.

The deceased, the husband of the late Cornelia Trudgen Valentine, was in his 80th year. He is survived by one daughter, Miss Annie M. Valentine, and one son, F. Alvord Valentine, both of Bristol; and one sister, Mrs. Emma Farow, Wilmington, Del.

Mr. Valentine was born in Wilmington, later residing for a time in Philadelphia. He came to Bristol 50 years ago. He was a member of the First Baptist Church and of Bristol Lodge, 970, B. P. O. E.

The Rev. Howard L. Zepp, pastor of First Baptist Church, and Rev. Francis H. Smith, Falsington, chaplain of the local order of Elks, will conduct the funeral service Monday at 2 p. m., at the Valentine residence, 322 Radcliffe street. Burial in Bristol Cemetery.

Mr. Valentine was in charge of the H. S. Rue Estate, undertakers. Friends may call Sunday evening.

SMALL FIRE

PARKLAND, Sept. 9.—The kitchen of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Williams, was damaged by fire this morning, blaze believed to have been started from a bonfire near the house. The property is owned by Mrs. M. Reinick. Neighbors fought the blaze by use of a hose connection from the summer home of Arthur Brennan, a resident of Philadelphia. South Langhorne and Langhorne fire companies responded.

Named for Governor

Nominated by the State Republican convention at New Haven as candidate for Governor of Connecticut, former Governor John H. Trumbull (above) will oppose Governor William L. Cross at the coming elections. Trumbull was described by one of the delegates as being "wringing wet" in sentiment. Senator Hiram Bingham, another wet, was enthusiastically renominated for the U. S. Senate.

NEW DIRECTORS NAMED BY UNION AT YARDLEY

Temperance Women Gather at Home of Mrs. Oliver Wharton

DISTRIBUTE PROGRAMS

YARDLEY, Sept. 9.—Monthly meeting of Yardley W. C. T. U. was held at the home of Mrs. Oliver Wharton, this week, with Mrs. Jesse E. Harper presiding. Mrs. Wharton conducted the devotionals.

Three new directors were appointed by the president: Institutes, Mrs. William C. Beener; motion pictures, Mrs. Charles F. Cook; and temperance and missions, Mrs. Edwin Wright. Through the flower mission director, Mrs. Frank Sigafos, the members reported having made during the past month, seven sick calls, one hospital visit and having sent out 24 bouquets.

A letter was read from the State motion picture director asking that signatures be obtained to petitions to be sent to Congress relative to motion picture laws, and asking the union to join the motion picture organization for clean movies. It was voted to send $2 for this, $1 was also sent to the American Tract Society.

A letter was read from the canal committee in the interest of the State Department of Forests and Waters, asking that the women's clubs of Bucks county consider themselves overseers of the Canal Parkway and give it more than casual attention.

Mrs. Wharton and Miss Nellie Gorton were appointed delegates to the county convention to be held in Richboro tomorrow. A balance of $47 was reported by Mrs. Walter H. Thompson, treasurer.

Mrs. Jesse Bilbee read articles from the Union Signal. As the program was on international relations, articles on peace were read by Miss Gorton and Mrs. Charles F. Cook. Programs for the year were distributed by Mrs. William H. Applegate, chairman of the program committee. Mrs. Applegate stated the committee had tried to make the meetings enjoyable as well as instructive. These include meetings on citizenship, scientific temperance instruction, soldiers and sailors work, international relations, Victory Day meeting, Willard Memorial meeting, youths meeting, Mothers' Day meeting, flower mission, local institute, Y. P. B. and L. T. L. meeting, a mother's and daughter's luncheon and a playlet.

Miss Harper, who has been touring the New England States, and who was in Portland, Maine, at the time of the total eclipse, gave an interesting account of the experience. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Linford Hampton, October 4th. Refreshments were served.

County Firemen To Have Meeting At Sellersville

SELLERSVILLE, Sept. 9.—At the Quarterly Meeting of Bucks County Firemen's Association to be held at Sellersville Fire Company hall, here, tomorrow evening, Charles Clark, of Wayne, will speak. Mr. Clark is secretary of the State Firemen's Association.

Mr. Clark has endeavored during the past several years to recover for fire companies in this county rebates on insurance due them. According to law, fire companies are entitled to a certain percentage of the money received for all insurance written in the State of Pennsylvania by out of State companies.

William L. Stackhouse, Hulmeville, county fire marshal, will also be present, and give a report.

Other invited speakers include: William Muldrew, president of Montgomery County Firemen's Association; John Nolan, president of Chester County Firemen's Association.

DRIVER OF AUTO WHICH KILLED LAD EXONERATED HERE

Witnesses' Evidence Showed
Milton Thomas Not Responsible for Tragedy

AT CORONER'S INQUEST

Testify Boy Who Was Killed and Cousin Ran Into Car's Path

The driver of the automobile which struck two boys on the Bristol Pike south of here, August 22nd, and which accident resulted in the death of one, was exonerated of all blame for the accident. A coroner's jury said the evidence of witnesses showed the accident was unavoidable.

The inquest was held yesterday afternoon in the Municipal Building and was to determine responsibility for the death of John Sweeney, Jr., Bristol Pike, near Croydon.

The driver of the car which struck Sweeney and his cousin, Joseph Bradley, 12, 2161 Furley street, Germantown, was Milton Thomas, 798 Belgrade street, Philadelphia.

Thomas was driving south on the Bristol Pike accompanied by his wife, baby and an aunt, Catherine Lindline, 1589 E. Houston street, Philadelphia.

The two boys, Sweeney and Bradley, according to witnesses, got out of another car which stopped on the right hand side of the highway facing Bristol. The two boys are alleged to have walked around the rear of the car they left and stepped directly into the path of the Thomas machine.

The principal witness was Joseph O'Donnell, Beaver street, who with his brother, Frank, were driving in the rear of the car which the boys got out of. Mr. O'Donnell said the Thomas car was traveling at a moderate rate of speed. "The boys walked around the car they got out of and into the path of the Thomas car," stated Mr. O'Donnell. His testimony was corroborated by his brother, Frank. Mr. O'Donnell took both youngsters to the Harriman Hospital, where the Sweeney boy died. Bradley suffered minor injuries but recovered.

It was testified that Thomas was not driving at an excessive speed at the time of the accident and swerved his car into and across the trolley tracks in an effort to avoid striking the youngsters.

Other witnesses were Catherine Lindline, Highway Patrolman Patterson, Milton Thomas, Daniel Dewsnap, Harriman Park.

The inquest was held by Coroner John J. Sweeney before a jury composed of John Hess, Fred Kenyon, Thomas Lawrence, Harry Vanhorn, Reed G. Ewing, and Thomas Gorton.

To Assist Service Men Not Now Employed

In line with the efforts of the Robert W. Bracken Post and in connection with the good work being done by Fred W. Reynolds to relieve the unemployment situation of Bristol, a list of 55 unemployed service men of Bristol has been forwarded to the Veterans Division, U. S. Employment Service, in response to their request for such information.

Service men not now employed are requested to contact Arthur F. Zug, commander, American Legion, Bristol, if they desire to be placed in line for State road work now being started.

FARMERS' STRIKE

Strikes involving miners and other classes of organized labor are not unusual in the United States, but the "farm strike" in Western Iowa is a novelty if not a freak. When the ultra-conservative and usually docile farmer rises up in arms economic history is in the making.

The situation is peculiar, indeed. On August 8 the Farmers Holiday Association headed by Milo Reno, declared a "selling strike" of 30 days. It has been credited with part of the rise in hog prices and with giving Iowa farmers a profit all along the line.

Obviously the purpose was to create an artificial shortage of farm products in order to boost prices. All farmers were supposed to join the "strike" but being farmers, a group never known to cooperate to the fullest, many chose to be "scabs." The result was the manhandling of a dairyman and the destruction of a truck loaded with milk.

Mr. Reno is to be commended for his modesty in claiming credit for only 10 cents of the rise of $1.70 in hog prices in the last six weeks, as well as for his foresight in timing his "strike" when success was assured. Farm prices were already climbing when the strike was called.

Would it be pertinent to ask Mr. Reno and his followers if a "strike" at planting time would not have been more effective than one at harvest? Natural crop shortages make price-fixing unnecessary.

NEW GOLD RUSH

Gold rushes in olden times were started by the discovery of rich deposits of yellow dirt. This generation has seen several started by unemployment.

Thousands of men and women have gone into the hills because they have nothing else to do and can eke out a living with the pick and pan. In three states alone there are 3,000 placer miners, mostly amateurs. A few may strike it rich; it is too bad all cannot.

Echoes of the historic days of gold are heard from the mining country. Vigilance committees have been organized to deal with claim jumpers, the villains of the dime novel days. Prospectors are being grub-staked by merchants and others willing to speculate a few hundreds on a long chance. And out of the mountains come rumors of nuggets and bonanzas. Even now landlits may be planning to seize gold shipments.

The reason this gold rush seems devoid of glamor, adventure and romance is because there are no hostile Indians to fight, no trackless deserts to cross or unknown mountains to penetrate, no wagon trains and no picturesque characters taken out of story books of the Wild West. Time adds the veneer of romance and adventure. A hundred years from now the placer miners of 1932 may take the place of the forty-niners.

From this distance it would appear that she is wearing more girl than bathing suit.

A new fire alarm warns the audience to leave and then bursts loudly into jazz music. Why the warning?

Daphne by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

At seventeen Daphne Haines finds herself the victim of a hard, calculating stepmother who had married her father for money. Crystal, the second Mrs. Haines' beautiful daughter, becomes the darling of the household, usurping Daphne's place in her father's affections. The two women tolerate Daphne until Ralph McKevitt, a wealthy young man who had been culling upon Crystal, discovers Daphne in the garden one lovely Spring day, and admires her. Crystal indignantly resents this, resorts to tears and temper, but is finally placated when her mother promises to "fix everything." Realizing that Daphne developing into beautiful womanhood may prove a thorn in the path of Crystal's conquest of McKevitt, Mrs. Haines determines to make the girl's life miserable. Cleverly she provokes a quarrel between Daphne and her father. Slyly, cunningly, Mrs. Haines gold-digs her aged husband to buy finery for Crystal, while Daphne is neglected. The pressure on family purse strings becomes so great that Mr. Haines calls a halt. Then his wife bitterly denounces him. Daphne feels that she can no longer tolerate this sordid, disordered household.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER IV.

THE old man pounded up the stairs. The three women in the hallway, waited, hardly daring to breathe.

"This thing has got to stop—I won't have it—I—"

"Wear your other one, it's plenty too good enough!"

"That old rag?" Crystal screamed. "To go out with Ralph McKevitt? Never—I'd sooner be dead!"

"Mama'll get you something to wear, Pet. Mama'll fix up something—"

"No thank you, I've been humiliated enough for one night—I won't go!" And then, bitterly, facing her tearful yearning mother, "Oh I knew it would be like this! I told you when you married the old skinflint!"

Daphne crept to her room. She heard Crystal's door slam, the grating of the key being turned on the inside.

Her cheeks burned with shame, shame for her father . . . to think he could come to this.

"We can't go on like this!" the girl thought wildly. "We'll all go mad, every one of us!"

And because she was only seventeen, dependent upon a father who didn't seem to want her, and because romance had passed her by for Crystal, she flung herself on the sagging old iron bed, and wept.

There was no "make believe" about Crystal. No wistful, misty dreams to blur her way. She knew what she wanted, and schemed ruthlessly and shrewdly to get it.

No sooner had the door slammed behind her than she was at the mirror, appraising the damage her angry tears had done. Hot water. Witch hazel. Plenty of cold cream. Thank heaven there was time to dress carefully. She had McKevitt about where she wanted him. With a little luck tonight . . . Oh, damn old Man Haines—if she only had that evening coat—gold was wonderful with her hair.

Still, there was the cloth of gold evening gown she had intended to save for the opera season. . . . With fingers that trembled a little she slipped it over her head. How delicately pink her bare arms were, how exquisitely plump her neck. A little daring perhaps, but when one has dimpled shoulders. . . . Oh, damn old Man Haines . . . no decent evening wrap and—Ralph due any minute!

And just before he came, more handsome, more impressive than ever in his not too English dress clothes, she thought of the shawl. The beautiful russet toned Parsley that Daphne once showed to her, Daphne's one treasure, that had belonged to her mother.

"Daphne—Daphne—"

"What?" A rather resentful, watery "what?" from Daphne.

Daphne, not promising favors. Besides, it would be just like the silly child to refuse it, she was so queer about anything that had belonged to her mother.

"I—I think I hear your ear yelling in the basement—I think it's Turner's dog—"

Before the words were out of Crystal's mouth, Daphne was flying to the rescue of Toots. Crystal slipped quietly into the shabby little room, took the shawl quickly from its tissue paper wrapping in the bottom bureau drawer. "I'll make it up to the kid," she thought, "and besides, she'll never know I wore it—"

It was unfortunate that a careless maid in the hotel cloak room

If only there were a picture of her—even a snapshot to remember her by. But there wasn't, only the yellow ivory prayer book . . . had she carried it on her wedding day? And one white glove with a pearl button, and the shawl, the glorious, glowing shawl . . .

It must be there. It must! Out came the blue scarf, the pink slip, all the poor little girlish treasures . . .

Feverishly she shook them out, felt under the drawer, in all the drawers, in the closet, in the trunk. It must be there—it must!

Back to the bottom drawer, another search . . . It was gone, no use looking any more. It was gone, mother's beautiful shawl . . .

Crystal . . . what made her think of Crystal? Then she remembered. The night Ralph took her to the party . . . Crystal, gleaming gold from head to heel, with something dark draped over the gold, something quaintly old fashioned, fringed, glowing faintly in the half light . . .

"Crystal! You took my Paisley shawl—Mother's! You give it back this minute—this minute!"

Crystal snickered. "Heaven will protect the working girl!"

that night permitted it to be stolen.

It was Thursday before Daphne discovered her loss. She was sitting on the floor in front of the bureau, rearranging her "best things." The pale blue scarf her Aunt Helen sent her for her birthday. The pink silk slip, a Christmas present, almost too nice to wear. Some day . . . but perhaps "some day" would never come . . .

She gulped angrily and put it back in its place, next to the best white silk stockings, and the candy box that held the clippings—newspaper pictures, eleven of them, of the greatest fullback Stanford ever knew . . . Ralph, who loved Crystal . . .

"I'll just keep one of them," she thought, "it won't be so silly just to save one—"

But she didn't. She grabbed them all quickly, before she'd have time to change her mind, and tore them to shreds. Ugly, fluttery yellow shreds . . . No more nonsense . . . no more thinking about him . . .

But how lonely it would be without them, without anyone to even pretend you loved . . . "Mother, you shouldn't have died . . . I want you . . . so much . . ."

Crystal was drying her yellow hair in the sun at her window. She dropped her silver-backed comb and brush with a clatter as Daphne flew at her like a small tornado.

"I won't have you going into my things—taking what doesn't belong to you—my mother's shawl—"

"Daphne—not so loud, for Pete's sake—you'll have Mama and your old chump of a father up here—"

"I don't care—you give it back to me—"

And then, afraid of what she saw in Crystal's face, "You wouldn't let anything happen to it? You—you haven't lost it? Oh, Crystal, it—it was my mother's—"

"Crystal! I won't have you girls fighting!" Above Daphne's strangled sobs, and her daughter's angry remonstrances, Mrs. Haines' voice shrilled, high and clear.

"It was an accident—she's carrying on as if I was a thief!"

"You are—you are—if you took it!"

Mrs. Haines' heavy hands closed on Daphne's shaking shoulders.

HISTORICAL TREES IN BUCKS COUNTY

A SERIES OF SKETCHES ABOUT NOTED TREES IN BUCKS COUNTY, COMPILED FROM DATA FURNISHED BY HENRY T. MOON, NURSERYMAN, AND GIVEN IN BRIEF ON THE OCCASION OF THE TREE PILGRIMAGE OF THE GARDEN SECTION, BRISTOL TRAVEL CLUB

THE LENNIG TREES

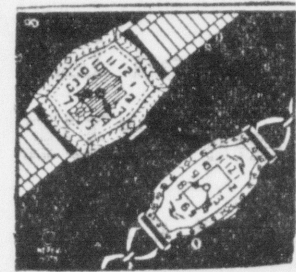

A mammoth pin oak, and a tulip poplar are located at the properties of Fred and Rufus Lennig, along the Delaware River at Andalusia.

The former, the pin oak, 14 feet 3 inches in circumference, is at the grounds of Fred Lennig. This is the tree which scientists at Princeton University visited annually for a period of years, in order to mark its growth and development.

The tulip poplar, having a circumference of 14 feet, is on the lawn of the Rufus Lennig property. The two are believed to be survivors of Penn's time.

What are known as "The Andalusia Oaks" are also on property of the Lennig brothers in another section, on ground adjoining the Michell's show grounds near the Andalusia railroad station. Until a few years ago this group consisted of three unusually fine specimens, a pin oak, a white oak, and a willow-leaved oak. The latter at the north end of the group was torn down by a storm nearly 20 years ago. The late Samuel C. Moon used these trees for subject matter in his articles and pictures on oaks, appearing in Bailey's Encyclopedia of Horticulture. The white oak is the only one that can be ascribed to the days of William Penn. The formation of the top of this tree is unusual, being so low and compact for the spread and apparent age. This has grown 20 inches in circumference of trunk since measured in 1904.

LEAGUE TEAMS CANNOT REACH AN AGREEMENT

(By T. M. Juno)

The playoff which the fans in this section of the county have been patiently waiting for may not take place unless something happens during the next week. The playoff referred to is that between the Hulmeville and Hibernians teams, winners of the first and second halves of the Lower Bucks County League, respectively.

Wednesday night at a meeting of the circuit, held at Hulmeville, arrangements for the playoff were supposed to have been made but neither team could come to an agreement.

Hulmeville expected to play the entire series on Saturday afternoons while the Hibernians wanted to give the Bristol fans a chance to see action by playing one game on Sullivan's field on a Sunday afternoon and one game at Hulmeville on Saturday afternoon. Hulmeville refused to come to Bristol on a Sunday, claiming that the league agreements prohibit Sunday playing. Neither team would give in and so the meeting adjourned without any arrangements made for the playoff.

Meanwhile, the fans who supported the circuit during its infant year are on the outside listening in while the teams are getting nowhere in their argument.

"BEWHISKERED" NINE TO AGAIN BE AT HULMEVILLE

HULMEVILLE, Sept. 9.—To satisfy a number of local fans, the management of Hulmeville baseball team has re-scheduled the Colored House of David for tomorrow.

This famous team appeared here last month and defeated the local team, 4-1, after a hard game.

The colored gents are playing good ball all over the eastern states, and this will probably be the last chance for local fans to see the "bewhiskered boys" before they return to Iowa and Missouri.

Black or Kobler will pitch for Hulmeville team and should be in good shape now that the local season has passed.

Game will start at 3.00 p. m. sharp.

THIRD WARD WINS IN 10-INNING GAME HERE

The Third Ward A. C. added another victory to its long list yesterday afternoon when they took a ten-inning game from the Shamrocks, 8-7. The Shamrocks had tied the score in the ninth by scoring two runs, only to have the Warders come back in the first extra inning, and Missilla cross with the winning run.

W. Gosline who relieved McGinley late in the game was credited with the victory while Snyder was the losing hurler.

"Jimmie" Massilla with four singles led the hitters of the fray. Whitshire with three hits was the losers' best. "Crude" Hagerman's catch of Fallon's line drive, robbing the hitter of a possible triple, was the fielding feature of the game.

of the Union, Mr. Percy S. Bullen, a British subject long resident in the United States (the correspondent of the London "Telegraph" and other influential papers, known as the "Dean of Foreign correspondents in New York"), together with the late Mr. Joseph Adams, formerly Mayor of Rye, Sussex, to be a non-political, non-partisan, and non-sectarian effort toward mutual cooperation—the characterization of the English-Speaking Union itself.

The objects of this "Namesake Towns" movement, as it most appropriately is termed, were stated as follows:

To organize exchange visits and courtesies between the namesake towns.

To encourage the research of history, to show the connections between sister towns in America and their originals abroad, to explore the histories of the early settlers in the United States and to trace the stories of the descendants.

To provide films and lantern slides of originals of namesake towns to illustrate lectures for schools and institutions.

To provide for exchange visits of Mayors, Officials, and Clergy, and civic parties, and reciprocal gifts of trees, plants, and flowers.

Considerable progress has been made in the past few months. There were visits of two Lord Mayors in October—one from Reading spent most of his time at Reading, Pennsylvania. The other, the Lord Mayor of Manchester and his party, visited Manchester, New Hampshire, and Manchester, Connecticut, where the English-Speaking Union co-operated as the municipal authorities arranged a most impressive welcome. An elaborate program was prepared in which the citizens participated en masse.

While Manchester was thus en fete, Torrington, Connecticut, was extending hospitality to Mrs. Starkey, the Mayoress of Old Torrington. Only this last month, the Mayor of Salisbury, Wiltshire, England, and his party, were guests of Salisbury, Maryland, for the bicentennial anniversary of the founding of that town, and lasting contacts were established besides the exchanges of gifts between the municipalities.

There are many ways in which the development of this idea can be carried out. Rotary Clubs, having the idea have exchanged messages, flowers, etc., with the clubs in England.

Another way in which a community can come into close relationship with that on the other side of the Atlantic is through an exchange of teachers. The Educational Committee of the English-Speaking Union has arranged 18 such exchanges since 1925. The amount of good which such teachers can do by presenting the viewpoint of their fellow citizens abroad and by bringing home to their pupils and others the results of their own intimate associations in other land, is incalculable.

Correspondence can be arranged between pupils and others; and casual tourists from this side should endeavor to include British namesake towns in their itineraries. They may be sure of a hospitable reception.

Since not all of us can arrange to go ourselves, however, we may pay a visit to our namesake town of Bristol, Gloucestershire, England, through this film sent by the courtesy of our friends there.

The settlement of Bristol existed before the Roman invasion. It was known to be a Saxon settlement about 1000 A. D. It first came into prominent notice when Harold's three sons, in an attempt to regain their patrimony from William the Conqueror, sailed up the Avon and were defeated under the walls of Bristol in 1069. It has had varied experiences in partisanship, governmental and Ecclesiastical, in the course of England's history.

Bristol's Celtic name was originally Caer Oder meaning the "City of the Chasm," through which the Avon flows. Its Anglo-Saxon name was Bristow, "The place at the bridge." The suspension bridge built in 1836 was, at the date of construction, one of the largest in the world, with the center span 676 feet.

Bristol has a population of 400,000. In this country there are Bristols in seventeen states.

Bristol, Pennsylvania has perhaps the closest connection with the original because of its association with William Penn. His father lived in Bristol, England, and is buried at the Church of St. Mary Radcliffe there. He himself lived there for some time and there married his second wife, Hannah Callowhill. The connection is still recorded in such names as Penn street, Pennsylvania street and Callowhill street.

"LITTLE HELEN" has her title at last. After eight years of effort, characterized chiefly by discouragement, the Jacobs member of the California Helens holds the National Women's Singles Trophy.

The admirers of Helen Jacobs are ready to forget that the title, in her case, does not mean that she is the best woman tennis player in the United States. "Little Helen's" accession to the throne might be compared to an eclipse of the sun. Admittedly, the other California Helen, Mrs. Wills-Moody, is the "sun" of the tennis firmament. But on occasion, as everyone knows, the moon, a lesser planet, does obscure the brilliance of the sun, and in this year 1932 that is just what Helen Jacobs has done. She has eclipsed Mrs. Moody—even though the latter was three thousand miles away in Paris when the other Helen defeated Carolin Babcock in the finals at Forest Hills.

Now for eight years, Helen Jacobs has ranked as one of the greatest woman tennis players in the world. By this time, had it not been for undoubtedly have been well emulated among the net immortals. As it is, until this year, she has been chiefly famous as a dependable runner-up. The almost superhuman tennis wizardry of Mrs. Moody is the answer.

Helen Jacobs is a fine competitor—and no mistake. The manner in which she breezed through the field at Forest Hills thrilled and thoroughly convinced all her critics. Observers said that Helen Wills Moody probably could have taken her over, but everyone else who tried failed. The most famous Helen of the tennis world has reigned now for many years. The end of her reign will come some time. Those close to the courts concede Helen Jacobs no chance of beating her this year or next. After that—perhaps. It was said during the matches at Forest Hills that the younger Helen, playing as she did against Miss Babcock in the finals, could have given Helen the first a stiff battle. Even the crown of victory might have fallen to the fair and wholesome Helen of Berkeley. But in all their previous matches, Helen Jacobs has always played her worst, against Helen Wills. At Seabright last year she went down to humiliating defeat. Earlier this year she could do nothing at Wimbledon with the tennis queen of the entire world. Miss Jacob's inferiority in her matches with Mrs. Moody has been largely psychological, but mental attitude is just as much a part of the game of tennis as skillful handling of the racquet.

Perhaps when Mrs. Moody is ready to be defeated, Miss Jacobs too will have passed the peak of her game. If that is so, from the present outlook, tennis fans will do well to mark in their book of futures the name of Alice Marble. This youngster lacks polish and experience. She's not a champion yet. But she's from California, she has a magnificent service, a fine volley and smash. Potentially, she seems better right now than that other fine young Californian, Carolin Babcock, who went to the finals with Miss Jacobs.
